Several Celebrated Speakers
On Program For Addresses

ROBINSON IS PRESENT

Attendance Expected To Reach More Than Two Hundred

PORT SMITH, June 4.—(AP)—Lawyers, judges and justices of the higher courts gathered here today for the opening of the annual two-day convention of the Arkansas Bar Association. The attendance was expected to reach 200 or more.

Several celebrated speakers including Henry Upson Sims, of Birmingham, Ala., president of the American Bar association, and Senator Joe T. Robinson, of Arkansas, were on the program for addresses.

Mr. Sims, a leader in the legal profession for many years was scheduled to address the convention at 2 p. m. this afternoon. Senator Robinson, who arrived in Little Rock Sunday morning for his first visit since he left there last January for London as a delegate to the Naval Limitations Conference, will deliver an address to the convention Thursday morning.

T. D. Wynne, of Fordyce, president of the state bar association, was scheduled to deliver his annual message to the association at the opening morning session, following which the members were to attend a luncheon. Judge Joseph M. Hill, chairman of the convention committee, had the assignment of welcoming the delegates here. Judge Hill was assisted in his preparations for the convention by Harry Daily and Harry Warner.

All meetings of the convention are to be held in Masonic Temple. A number of visitors from Oklahoma were expected to attend.

Thursday's session will be devoted to business of the association, including election of officers and selection of the 1931 meeting place of the association. Senator Robinson's address will be the outstanding feature on the morning program for Thursday. The convention committee has arranged entertainment for the women visitors who have accompanied the delegates here. A tea has been arranged for this afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. McDonough. Other social activities have been planned for the delegates and their wives and daughters.

Brothers Captured After Gun Battle

Five Men Wounded When Posse Clashes With
Bank Robbers

MANDELLONA, Mich., June 4.—(AP)—Three brothers, members of a quartet of robbers who held up the Antrim County State Savings bank here Monday, were being held in custody today after two days of gun battle in which five men were wounded. The turmoil died down today and shot guns were placed back in their racks, after a four robber had escaped on a train.

Ceylvestus, Leonard and Fred Elliott, were the brothers captured, and are former residents of this community. Leonard and Fred were wounded yesterday, the latter probably fatally, in a shot gun battle with a posse that came upon them in an alfalfa field near here. R. C. Bennett, member of the posse was wounded when a shot was inflicted into his body.

Two citizens who took part in the battle, and who are in a serious condition as a result of wounds received are Herbert Sullivan and Dr. J. H. Gerber.

Kroger Company "On Air" Tonight

National Broadcast Announced for 8 p. m.
Each Wednesday

A combination of melody, mirth and drama is to be featured in weekly radio programs now being broadcast each Wednesday night at 8 o'clock by the Piggley Winkley-Kroger Grocery company, according to Carl Copeland, manager of the local store. His firm, comprising 9,000 retail stores all over the nation, enters the field of broadcasting with a series of some of the finest music that can be found. According to the apparent trend of radio audiences, symphony, classical and semi-classical music will be featured. William Stross, nationally known composer and music director is in charge of the music. Edward A. Byron will write the stories enacted by the Kroger radio players. The entrance of this company into the field of radio advertising will not disturb their program of price advertising used for each of their stores, individually, and their good-will advertising now appearing in some newspapers. In fact, this advertising may be increased, according to A. C. Merrill, president of the company.

Hoover Explains Pension Bill Veto

Favors Modified System
For Spanish War Veterans, He Says

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP)—While the newly enacted Spanish war pension measure was being transmitted to the State Department for incorporation into the country's laws, President Hoover reiterated today the objections he raised in vetoing the legislation.

In response to questions at his regular press conference, the president said:

"I am in favor of a liberalizing of the Spanish war veteran pensions," he said, "because they have not been on a parity with other services, but I have not changed by opinion that it should have been worked out in such a way that men, or men having substantial incomes, should not draw pensions from the government."

"I have made no suggestion at any time of a pauper provision against veterans or anything akin thereto. I do not believe we should alter the principles which have been held for Civil war veterans all these 70 years, requiring that men claiming pensions should have at least 90 days service."

Further than this, I do not believe it is right to change our national policy and to call upon the nation to pay disability allowances to men who have or who may tomorrow destroy their health by vicious habits."

"I have received numerous communications from veterans supporting these views."

The bill will benefit approximately 114,000 Spanish war veterans, the Philippine insurrection and the China relief expedition, and will cost approximately $11,500,000 annually. It liberalizes in many respects existing legislation.

At the same time this act was being enrolled among the national statutes, the Senate Finance Committee was working on a House measure liberalizing World War veteran's compensations.

A modification of the House proposal was discussed but the committee deferred action pending consultation with President Hoover. The estimated cost of the compromise bill is $100,000,000. There have been varying estimates of the cost of the House measure, ranging from $150,000,000 to $400,000,000.

Bishop Stands By Refusal To Answer Political Quizzes

Is Unshaken By Warning
That He May Be Convicted of Offense

IS PRIVATE AFFAIR

Insists Congress Has No
Right to Interfere in Campaign Actions

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP)—Unshaken by a warning that he might be convicted of a penal offense, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., today stood by his refusal to answer Senate Lobby committee questions about his 1928 activities against the candidacy of Alfred E. Smith.

Even if he were not subpoenaed, the Southern Methodist Bishop told the committee he would not submit "intolerable" inquiry into what he regarded as his own private affairs. With no quorum present, the committee turned their questions to other channels.

A decision probably will be rendered later. Chairman Cawaway, who was last night in Arkansas, agreed that Cannon could not be forced to answer.

Wash of Montana, said other witnesses had been punished for refusal to answer certain questions before a senate committee, and some method may be created to deal with the Southern Bishop.

Cannon insisted that congress has no right to interfere with a persons political interests.

In the anti-Smith campaign he said that he was not acting as a Bishop, but was "James Cannon," a private citizen.

Will Try Asphalt On State's Roads

Little Rock Report Indicates
New Surface on Highway No. 2

LITTLE ROCK, June 4.—(Special)—It is generally understood throughout the State and the Highway Department plans a dustless asphalt treatment for a considerable mileage of the state highways, this being made necessary because the revenues from bond sales cannot possibly be sufficient to concrete any substantial part of the 8,900 miles of highways now in the State system. Also, because of the fact that as traffic becomes more dense upon the gravel roads, maintenance costs increase accordingly.

These maintenance costs are now averaging $300 a mile on gravel roads, running up as high as $2,000 a year per mile on some gravel roads which have a traffic of about 1700 cars a day.

Experience has shown the Highway Department that a 6-inch gravel surface, costing about $7,000 a mile to lay, loses about one inch of material a year where the traffic is as high as 1,000 vehicles a day.

The Highway Department will experiment to some extent with a penetration method similar to that used in Texas, probably first on No. 2 highway from Magnolia, east toward El Dorado to the Union county line where it connects with the concrete into El Dorado. This method requires about half-inch coating of asphalt and gravel at a cost of about $2,000 a mile.

Most of this asphaltic treatment, however, generally called "black top," will be the retreat, used in many of the eastern and southeastern states, secured by mixing broken stone with a composition composed of 90 per cent asphalt and 40 per cent naphtha. This retreat will cost about $4,200 a mile, to lay and will have for the first three years, a very nominal maintenance cost. When it does show appreciable wear, a new top course of about half inch of stone and asphalt can be applied with a minimum of labor cost, bringing up the asphaltic mat and as repairs are made and other top courses are applied, this mat will be made thicker each time.

Contract has already been let for the construction of retreat surface from Hot Springs to Ouachita river on No. 70, a distance of about 5 miles and this construction will be continued on Nos. 70, 27, 24 and 71 to the Oklahoma line, also, on the road from Hot Springs to Arkadelphia and in a large number of other projects. It is planned by the Highway Department to have 500 miles of retreat surface completed by November and eventually an addition 1000 miles of this construction will make about one-third of the state highway system dustless.

Much work has already been accomplished in the State in the separation of grade crossings. Eighty-six crossings have been eliminated in Arkansas in 1929, which is more than in any other state in the Union.

19-Year-Old Girl Slayer Freed by Jury

PINEVILLE, Ky., June 4.—(AP)—Mrs. Ruth Robinson, 19-year-old accused slayer of Mrs. S. P. Nightingale, was freed today by the Bell county jury, after deliberating only twenty minutes.

Mrs. Robinson shot and killed Mrs. Nightingale at Pary, a mining camp near here because she is alleged to have "taken her man."

Gunn (above), of Sylacauga, Ala., was arrested on a charge of murder. Virginian Is Held Following Attack

Eighty-three Year Old
Wife Is Probably Fatally Wounded

HONAKER, Va., June 4.—(AP)—Davy Walls, 81, was in jail here today charged with attacking and seriously wounding his 83-year-old wife with an ax and knife. They had been married 50 years.

Neighbors said that Walls, after wounding his aged spouse, held off her rescuers two hours with a gun before two men rushed him from the rear and overpowered him.

At the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Field, Mrs. Walls was in a serious condition. She told officers her husband attacked her with an ax, and doctors said there also were evidences that a knife had been used.

Mrs. Field said she entered her parents' home while Walls was holding neighbors at bay with his gun, but Walls threatened her, and she ran.

Before it became known that Mrs. Walls had been wounded, Walls told the Rev. Joseph Hubbard, a minister living nearby, that both he and his wife would be dead in 24 hours. It was some time later, officers said, that he staged his stand against his neighbors.

Negro Mob Victim Was Ex-Arkansas Convict

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., June 4.—(AP)—Attorney General J. Berry King said today that investigators had learned the name of a man suspected of having shot Henry Argo, negro, during a mob attack on the county jail at Chickasha early last Saturday.

The attorney indicated several witnesses may testify against the suspect at an inquest at Chickasha today into the killing who was accused of having assaulted a white woman.

Argo was released from the Arkansas penitentiary April 8 after serving 60 days for escaping from the Lincoln county, Arkansas jail. It was sentenced to two years for grand larceny in February, 1928. Last June he escaped, but was recaptured the next day and was released in February of this year.

Enrollment Passes 400 At Henderson State

ARKADELPHIA, Ark., June 4.—Henderson State Teachers college enrollment for the first annual summer session passed the 400 mark Tuesday and school teachers continued to arrive. President Womack is of the opinion that 500 may be the total enrollment after the second summer term commences.

The big enrollment caused President Womack to send out appeals for additional members of the faculty. Six teachers besides the regular faculty have been obtained and it is likely that others will be sought. The dormitories of the college have overflowed and many are taking rooms in the residences of the city.

Asks Sheriffs To Obtain Accounts of Poll Tax Receipts

Check Reveals Number of Tax Receipts' Unaccounted For

ACTION IS TAKEN

Special Receipts Issued
Under Act of 1929
Legislature

LITTLE ROCK, June 4.—(AP)—A check of records having revealed 923 special poll tax receipts, authorized last year by a ruling, had been accounted for, State Auditor J. Oscar Humphreys today took steps to obtain an accounting from 64 sheriffs of the state.

The receipts were printed and distributed to permit persons who had not paid their regular poll taxes to obtain auto, hunting and fishing licenses which denied them under an act of the 1929 legislature.

Mr. Humphreys, in a letter, asks submitted to them by the county treasurer the number of special tax the sheriffs to save the certificates receipts, and return to the auditors office all unused receipts.

Mr. Humphreys, in his letter to the sheriffs, said receipts that were sent to counties, were charged against them on his books.

Employee Injured When Fire Destroys Cars

EL DORADO, June 4.—(AP)—One man was slightly injured and 24 used automobiles were destroyed at a loss estimated to be approximately $5,000 in a fire which swept the used car department of Smackover early today.

Red Sough, chop foreman, suffered burns which a wire broke and struck him across the head and shoulders.

Skyscraper Is Home of Chi "Pit"

Old Furnishings Will Be
porary Structure

CHICAGO, June 4.—(AP)—Only the excited shouts and jerky gestures of the white coated traders will be carried over to the new $12,000,000 home of the board of trade when it moves in June 9.

The old furnishings, many of the old practices, will be left behind in the temporary Clark street structure which the board has occupied since 1928.

The eleventh home of the historic and largest grain exchange, is on the site of the tenth home—at the head of La Salle street, looking north through Chicago's financial canyon.

It is 44 stories from the street level to the pediment upon which Ceres will preside. The goddess of agriculture, 40 feet tall, built of aluminum will stand atop the structure, a drop of 608 feet from her head.

The trading room is on the fourth floor, 167 feet by 111 feet, five stories high.

There are the traditional "pits" where trading in grain futures is done, one for wheat, the largest, and then corn, oats and rye.

Electric lights flash quotations; electric clocks aligned with the naval clock at Arlington; electric recorders; insulated walls and floors to deaden sound, with ornaments and lighting fixtures in modernistic design, are new to "pit" surroundings.

Most of the 44 floors are given over to offices.

Trading in grains in Chicago began as far back as 1838, but not until 10 years later was a market established. Eighty-two merchants organized the Board of Trade of the City of Chicago.

After occupying several rented rooms, the board had its own house in 1860. There were 1,586 members. In 1885 it was a tenant in the chamber of commerce building. The Chicago fire drove it out in 1871 and business was done in a wigwag.

The next year the exchange was in the rebuilt chamber of commerce building.

The most famous of the exchanges' abodes was built in 1885 on the present site.

In it Philip S. Armour unsuccessfully sought to corner the wheat market; Patton virtually succeeded and Arthur Cullen began a spectacular career in grain and stock speculation.

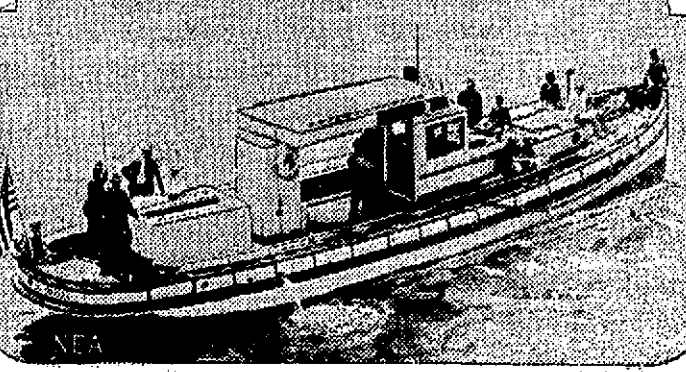

It was the "pit" of stage and novel. The facts of its history were more glamorous than the fiction.

Family Name With Paper For 73 Years

GENESCO, Ill., June 4.—(UP)—When the Genesco Republic issues its 75th anniversary edition tomorrow the publishers, Will and Charles Lieberknecht, may look back upon 73 years that their family name has been associated with the staunch Republican party weekly.

Their father, Adam Lieberknecht, joined the Republic in 1857, became part owner in 1863 and purchased the paper outright in 1877.

The files of the Republic for 1856 bear editorials urging election of John C. Fremont for President of the United States. Later the paper supported Abraham Lincoln for the same post.

The elder Lieberknecht was appointed consul to Tampico, Mexico, in 1890. President McKinley appointed him consul to Zurich in 1897. He served for nine years in Switzerland. The sons of Adam Lieberknecht took over the paper in 1900. The present publishers were assisted by another brother, J. Frank Lieberknecht, until his death in 1924.

345,000 Textile Workers in 1,440 Southern Mills

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 4.—(AP)—Textile mills of seven southern states employ approximately 345,000 persons in 1,440 plants, a survey just completed by representatives of the American Federation of Labor shows.

The figures were obtained from states where the general organization campaign is now in progress.

North Carolina had the greatest number of mills and employees of the states visited.

Others were Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, South Carolina, Virginia and West Virginia.

Mills in these states have about 20,000,000 spindles, 358,000 looms, 60,279 knitting machines and 8,000 braiders.

Red River Rise At Alexandria Causes Concern

Water Reaches Stage of 40.8 Feet, Passing Predicted Crest

LEVEE STILL HOLDING
Livestock Being Moved
To Highground for Protection

ALEXANDRIA, La., June 4.—(AP)—Red river here Tuesday caused concern with a rise of four tenths of a foot in the past 24 hours. It had reached a stage of 40.8 feet, three-tenths above the maximum predicted crest.

The level of the river had reached the top of the levee proper, protecting Pineville, on the north bank of the river directly across from Alexandria and was lapping the planks and earthwork on the top of the levee.

Alexandrians said that they believed the Pineville levee would hold. The river did not go higher than 40 feet. Pineville has more than 250 inhabitants and the Louisiana college is located there.

The water had reached the top of the levee at Moncla Ferry, also on the north side of the river and was causing some apprehension there.

A message from Marksblaine, a town of about 2000 population below here in Avoyelles parish, stated that the Benruth Cross levee there, which has been giving trouble, was still holding.

Cattle and other livestock in the surrounding section were being moved to higher ground.

Today's rise placed the river at Alexandria fur and eight-tenths feet above flood stage.

Sheffield Attacks "Legalized Graft"

Criticizes Parnell and Hays—Demands Revenue Audit

MORRISTON, Ark., June 4.—(AP)—Judge John C. Sheffield, of Helena, candidate for governor in a campaign address here Tuesday night, continued his attack on what he calls "legalized graft" and demanded an audit of the department of revenues and an investigation into the state banking department.

He criticized Governor Parnell, for failing to issue a deficiency proclamation for an audit of the department of revenues and Brooks Hays for his alleged indifference to such an audit.

Despite the increased cigar and cigarette tax collections by the department of revenues, Sheffield charged that "complaints were heard all over Arkansas that our common schools are not receiving an increase in their revenues from the state."

"Let's have a look into the department of revenues then, and may be we can find a way to repeal some laws and still have just as much money for our state institutions as we do now," he said.

With reference to an audit of the banking department, Sheffield charged that "a Little Rock firm of lawyers which has been collecting thousands of dollars a year through this department was doing its part by supporting both Hays and Parnell," and that "the people of Arkansas won't hear anything from Harvey Parnell or Brooks Hays about this department."

Sheffield pledged himself, if elected, to the repeal of "all these laws which provide legalized graft."

Circulating Scandal
Sheet

BATON ROUGE, La., June 4.—(AP)—Kemble K. Kennedy, law school senior of Louisiana State University, was suspended today from the university after his indictment by the Grand Jury yesterday on charges of circulating obscene and indecent matter by publication of the "Whang-doodle," a scandal sheet. He was at liberty today on $2,500 bond and the suspension will prevent his graduation Monday night. The Grand Jury indictment followed testimony of students, professors and newspapermen from Minden, La.

Kennedy was president of the law school student body, former president of the university student body. The indictment caused surprise, as the front page of the publication carried a vicious attack on him but it mainly assailed members of the faculty.

The United Press

THE STAR this week obtained the state news service of United Press—one of the three great American news-gathering agencies.

United Press news will be used to supplement the daily wire reports of the Associated Press, of which The Star has been a member ever since its establishment as a daily paper. With the Associated Press and United Press, the newspaper and its readers are drawn as close to the scene of state and national events as it is possible for the printed page to bring us.

The Star is primarily a local newspaper. It is more interested in local development than in reporting at great length the details of national and foreign news, of which it gives merely a brief, accurate picture. The main purpose of our United Press connection established this week at Little Rock, where a new state bureau has been set up in the Grunhart building, is to furnish special stories about Arkansas. Many of these stories will pertain to this district and in that sense will be "local."

We believe this will make The Star an even more complete newspaper than was achieved last year. We have heard many comments on the speed with which news pictures have been obtained in Hope, coming from the East frequently as quickly as the second day after the news event. Our readers will remember that we published pictures of the Columbus penitentiary fire within forty-eight hours of the time of the disaster. News pictures come to The Star through Newspaper Enterprise Association (NEA), which also furnishes the cartoons that all of you know, "Out Our Way," "Freckles and His Friends," "Mom'n Pop," and various other daily features.

"Over the Alps Lies Italy"

THESE are days when boys in freshly starched collars and with a lump in their throats stand before their fathers and mothers and school mates in final valedictories of high school days, writes Editor Stanley Andrews in the Arkansas Farmer. Sweet girl graduates in white chiffon speak their declamations and say good-bye to four glorious years in pursuit of their diplomas. These boys and girls are off to the business of living in a new world or stepping on up the ladder to the more impersonal college or university.

These graduating exercises are great days through the towns and hamlets and rural high schools of America. And while it is more or less of an assumption that somewhere in almost every valedictory will be some reference to the famed words of Napoleon, it is not as far fetched and away from the realities of the moment as one would think. While a great general gazed at the unsurmountable Alps and sighed and dreamed of the land to conquer over there—in his breast was being born the courage that would surmount the Alps. So it is with every boy and girl—they dream of the lands beyond their Alps mountains. It may be the Alps of four years more of school—it may be the desire born of necessity in this very important job of making a living for oneself and for others. It may be a dream to write, to achieve fame, to do any of the great and important tasks of the world.

The eternal challenge of youth is, "I will!" and it is the unending caution of our elders to "go slow!"

Probably the fathers and mothers sitting, with tear-filled eyes, in front of those graduates as they go through the exercises of receiving their diplomas, could caution impetuous and ambitious youth and guide them around some of the pitfalls. Probably they could tell them that after all the lot of most of us in life is merely to take care of today's food and lodging and to plan for the next one. That expecting to do too much will more than likely bring heartaches, bitter disappointments and disillusionment. But it is youth to try new things. It is for youth to achieve the impossible and this never ending supply of youth and ambition flowing into the blood stream of this nation is what keeps it moving on—continually reminding us that over yonder, yonder behind the hills or behind the Alps if you please, lies the land to conquer.

Maturity could probably remind youth that while there is pleasure and some satisfaction in the outward achievements of man, the real kingdom of contentment is the mastery of one's self; that the inner satisfaction of duty done well is about the only thing one can carry before the final judge of all human conduct.

We hope the young folks that are finishing the colleges and high schools this year will pitch their tents in Arkansas. Our state needs their enthusiasm and their dreams of accomplishing the impossible. The Italy that Napoleon dreamed of conquering was beyond the rugged Alps—our Italy may well be over the hill to the next valley in our home county or state.

At any rate to those of us who have passed off the stage of yesterday's commencement, these commencement days recall tender memories and of course we cannot refrain from comparing our dreams then with our meager achievements a few.

Our County Census Report

ALTHOUGH Hope's 24 per cent increase in population was a disappointment to some people, it was thoroughly satisfactory in comparison with the census returns on Hempstead county.

The county stood still—even lost slightly—over the last ten years. With returns practically complete, the 1930 census shows the county to have a present population of 30,769, as against 31,602 in 1920. The same story obtains in Sevier, Polk and Howard counties, all in this district, and all of which stood still or declined slightly.

It is too obvious to observe that this is an unhealthy and undesirable condition for any community to be in. It is also true that it is immaterial what the census shows about Hope, the key city, in the face of such a report on the territory surrounding the city. Hope's increase doesn't mean anything when the county stands still. It doesn't mean anything when a farmer five miles out moves to town—our right hand is merely swapping with our left. We have added nothing to the sum total of population in the county, and it is doubtful if we have added much wealth.

There is this compensating fact, however, that this county along with the other agricultural districts of America was struck a hard blow in the collapse of commodity prices and farm valuations seven and eight years ago. The effect is undoubtedly felt in the present census. It is nothing that applies directly against our own county and section, but the condition is general, and not restricted entirely to agricultural regions. If you have been reading the wire reports on the census figures of the big cities back East you know that among the textile centers of New England there were several cities of 100,000 which showed less than 10 per cent increase, and even declined. Like King Cotton, the textile business has been sick for several years. New England cities have lost their coveted percentage increases to new industrial cities in the Carolinas, Tennessee and elsewhere.

This is a period of transition, when industry is seeking new locations, and agriculture must develop new methods. New England has seen its textile industry, entrenched for the last hundred years, utterly crushed by competition with Southern mills. The Southern farmer has seen King Cotton fall from 40 cents to 15 and 12 cents. There is no good reason for believing that either of them will ever come back again.

Hempstead county is fortunate in that her farmers are already well advanced in experiments with truck crops and livestock. They have definitely abandoned cotton as they used to farm it. It still remains their greatest cash crop—but the world market is narrowing down to the point where the only American cotton that can be marketed at all is a limited amount of superior quality grown by experts. Hindus, Chinese and Africans can furnish the other kind to Liverpool at a price below what it costs the American to produce it.

Yet there is encouragement in the knowledge that what American cotton is actually grown and sold will be produced in our own section of the South. We can beat Georgia and the Southeast states on both quality and price.

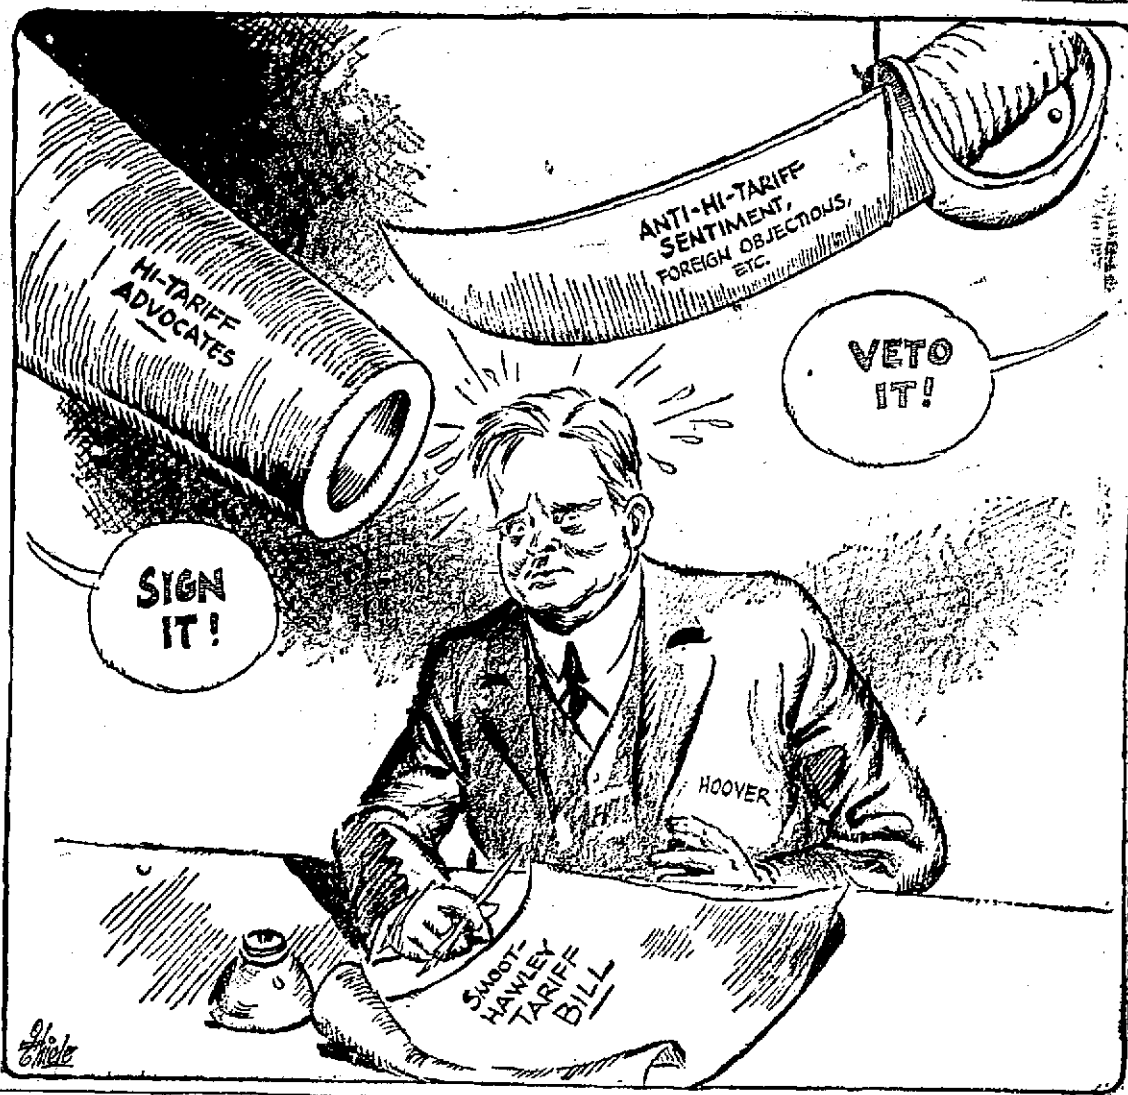

We heard more about this last month when William Johnson, development editor of the Arkansas Democrat, addressed the district meeting of real estate men in Hope. The problem confronting the farmer is to know what lines are going to make money for him in the next ten years. The problem before the banker, city man, and farmer also, is to know what lines of activity will be most likely to repair the damage done by the collapse of cotton, and to rebuild our shattered farm valuations. You hear it said that a farm becomes increasingly hard to sell each passing year. That might have been true five years ago, just after the cotton collapse; but nowadays it is an old story. Something ought to be done about it. The average Southern farm, free of stone, fairly fertile, and with our famous climate, is a paradise by the side of the rocky hill farms on which half the rural population live through the short summers and hard winters of Pennsylvania and New York. That such a land should be so abused, is inexcusable. There was a reason for that poor showing in the 1930 census—but there won't be in 1940.

When William Johnson returned to Little Rock after the real estate meeting here he wrote the editor of The Star a letter in which he said:

"I firmly believe that there is a great agricultural opportunity before this great state. We are in the line of the nation's path of growth, which is from northeast to southwest. The costs of many kinds of agricultural production are rising in the older sections, with higher land values and taxes and the competition with factories for labor. This must automatically transfer a larger and larger portion of the country's staple agricultural production to our lower coast region. The need is for men who can see the situation clearly and help to direct it, so that we shall not be left entirely to the will of blind economic forces. Though that may accomplish progress, the gain costs too much in human distress."

Mr. Johnson's letter makes it reasonable to presume that the safe thing for the Hempstead county farmer to do is to make his property a carbon-copy of the better class general farms throughout the Middle West. That means more grains, more forage, more livestock and more poultry. And in order to accomplish this, the bankers and business men of Hope have got to help. They have no other choice. The 1930 county census tells us that.—W.

Held In Killing

A youthful husband and a 22-year-old quarter-blood Indian girl are held at Ashtabula, O., for first degree murder, charged with slaying the husband's wife because of their love for each other. Tilby Smith, shown below the husband, put his wife "on the spot," they have confessed, by leaving her in their truck parked by a lonely road; then Mrs. Maude Lowther, above, his innamorata, appeared and shot the woman to death.

"Second Wife" Great Drama at the Grand

When Russell Mack was selected to direct Radio Pictures' "Second Wife," at the Grand Theatre Thursday, he insisted on obtaining a cast which best fitted the roles in this unusual play.

Conrad Nagel was signed to portray the father-husband; Lila Lee admirably fitted the role of the "second wife," little Freddie Burke Frederick made an appealing stepchild; the lovable Mary Carr, was chosen for the aged family servant—but who would fill the part of the aristocratic, suave "other man" whose violent love making almost wrecks the happiness of the young married couple?

Mack wired New York and learned that Hugh Huntley, who had played this role during the Broadway run of the stage play, from which "Second Wife" is taken, was available and he was signed for the part.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—If Dwight Morrow gets into the United States Senate the wets will have what they need more than anything else in the world—a leader.

And if he should plunge on and become a presidential candidate—well, anyway, that's the possibility a lot of people are talking about—he would cap a career quite unparalleled in American public life.

Physically he's almost a little shrimp of a man. A few years ago he was a member of the great banking house of Morgan. Other men became Morgan partners and that's enough for them; they're glad to die that way. But this little man Morrow has been growing steadily in figurative stature. Whoever heard tell before of a former Morgan partner being considered a presidential possibility?

Has a Fine Record

Even the United States Senate failed to devour him—this Morgan partner—when Coolidge made him ambassador to Mexico. Everyone remembers the almost magical way in which Morrow transformed Mexican-American relations from nasty to nice. He looked bigger than ever when Hoover put him on the American delegation to the London naval conference. According to fellows who were over at that conference he looked like the best bet there. Some gave him credit for being the mind which saved the conference at its most critical stage when it seemed sure to bust up in failure.

Now he comes along, running for dry.

the Republican senatorial nomination in New Jersey, and stakes his public career on his conviction that something must be done about prohibition. Everyone agrees that what Morrow had to say about that issue was one of the best statements that ever came from the wet side. Wet or dry, everyone sat up, took notice, agreed that Morrow had political courage and that he had made a statesmanlike speech.

Of course his frankness may get him licked. If he had been willing to hedge he might have avoided the candidacy of Congressman Franklin Fort, who is Hoover's friend and who will run to all intents and purposes as a dry. The other candidate is former Senator Frelinghuysen, who has lots of money and a thirst for office that can only be quenched by being elected to one. Frelinghuysen, who has been dry, recently decided to be wet for this campaign. There is some danger that he and Morrow will split the wet vote while Fort gets the nomination with the minority dry vote.

But the wets need Morrow so badly in the Senate that they may well pray for him. In recent years they have had just two men in public office who were really big stuff—Governor Al Smith of New York and Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, both Democrats. Smith passed out of the picture as a wet leader with his defeat in the 1923 presidential campaign. Reed was the most effective wet in Congress for years. Then he retired from the Senate and was succeeded by a

I'd like to think when life is done, That I had filled a needed post; That here and there I'd paid my fare With more than idle talk and boast; That I had taken gifts divine, The breath of life and manhood fine, And tried to use them now and then In service for my fellowmen. I'd hate to think when life is through, That I had lived my round of years A useless kind that leaves behind No record in this vale of tears That I had wasted all my days By treading only selfish ways, And that this world would be the same If it had never known my name.

Star in Real Sea Wreck Drama

No movie director—or press agent—could have arranged a ship-wreck-at-sea thriller such as that which imperiled Nancy Carroll, above, when a launch which she was aboard all but foundered in a stiff gale in Massachusetts Bay, off Boston. Introduction Of The New Konjola Medicine Hailed

Many People Calling At The Briant Drug Store to Learn Its Merits

Immediately following yesterday's announcement that the advanced medical preparation, Konjola, was to be introduced in Hope many local people were eagerly seeking this medicine and telling of reports about it which they had received from relatives and friends in cities where the herbal compound was previously introduced. Many who called at the Briant Drug Store stated they already knew about this medicine and some had secured it through acquaintances at larger cities.

The extent to which this Konjola has aroused interest proves very clearly that health troubles, due to disordered stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, are so common that hundreds are suffering daily. The forms of misery described by a great many sufferers interviewed yesterday, were as follows:

STOMACH: Indigestion and gas bloating, feeling like a rock in the stomach, which in reality is a mass of undigested food, dyspepsia, intense pain in the stomach and chest, wild heart palpitations, feeling like a rock from the throat to the pit of the stomach and tissue, sour stomach, ach, awful headaches, loss of weight, dizzy spells, cramps, spitting up bits of half-digested food and a hot, sour liquid.

LIVER: Attacks of biliousness, sick headache that may last for days, constipation, dizzy spells, yellowish complexion.

KIDNEYS: Sharp pains over the kidneys, a dull, aching feeling across the back, stiffness in the back and lower limbs, especially in the mornings just before arising, frequent getting out of bed during the night, dizziness, spots before the eyes, lack of vitality.

BOWELS: Painful, bloated feeling in the lower stomach, worn out feeling, sleeplessness.

Many other forms of suffering arise from the disordered condition of the system that results from a sluggish stomach, liver, kidneys, and bowels. For instance, there may be rheumatic and neuritis troubles, with its agonizing aches and pains.

The above forms of suffering yield readily to the work of Konjola and this medical preparation has so completely ended the health troubles of so many thousands in larger cities that it is declared to be what countless sufferers in this section have long needed to actually reach their cases.

Konjola is now being sold for the first time in Hope at the Briant Drug Store, where many people are calling throughout the day to find out about this surprising new medicine. Adv.

Committees Named For Women's Meet

Speed Transac- tion of Business by Ex- ecutive Sessions

Charles Cannon, president of the Business and Professional Women's Association, estimated the office at the meeting of the organization last evening, at which time the executive sessions of the committees for the ensuing year were held.

decided to hold an executive session of the committee at the second Tuesday evening session, by which it is expected that the transaction of business will be expedited.

Miss Fleming retiring treasurer, her report for the year and turned the books over to Mrs. Allen, who asked for a list of absences during the summer and Miss Nalle Bennett took her place during that time. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the new president, Mrs. Allen.

Mrs. Henry, whose efficient the Hope Public Library is much commended, appointed the club and gave her report for the past year and bespoke the active cooperation in the campaign soon to be started. Mrs. Henry stated that the total of 1,297 volumes were added during the year.

There is an urgent need for more books and for more shelves. Much cannot be said in supporting the worthy project and the committee, surely recognize the value of its library to their community and will surely do everything in their power to foster so worthy an organization.

It was, in a sense, a sister's meeting. Miss Clara Cannon, president of the club, and Mrs. Ida Mae Cannon, her sister, were present. Mrs. Ida Mae Cannon was introduced by Mrs. Charles Walker, club member and Mrs. Flor- ence Hicks introduced Mrs. Bessie Phillips, a native of Hope, who is now a member of the Clarendon, B. & P. W. Some Baseball Notes

The trade of Larry Benton for the Cubs seems to assure the Giants' new have the infield in. Baseball, with Benton at short, Clegg at second, Lindstrom at third, and Edd Roush at first, would be just the lineup for Larry Benton to win 50 games this year, five of them from the Giants. And for Clegg to sprain his Adam's Apple after a grounder.

Wicker Cochran, the sparkplug of the A's, says he still late when he cracked that bone in his ankle going into third and that it had hit the dirt right, he wouldn't have been put on the shelf. Meanwhile, without their sparkplug, the A's have been chugging patiently along, winning plenty of ball games. The sparkplug of the A's this year seems to be the other American League pitchers—except Washington's.

Mark Koenig may be, through very soon as a ball player because of failing eyesight. He has been under the care of a specialist for months. Koenig is only 26 years old, but his eyes have been steadily growing worse.

Wright Is Right

A great shortstop goes back, another who went back comes up again. That is Glenn Wright of the Dodgers. Wright's shortstopping this year was one of the greatest factors in Brooklyn's climb from seventh to the top of the National League ladder. Uncle Robbie sits slumped in the dugout, telling all hands: "There's one of the greatest shortstops I ever laid eyes on." And he isn't way off his base, at all.

"There ain't no more pitchers," is the talk of the big league managers as the ball goes hopping over the garden wall. Ten runs, no matter how many, can't win a ball game. This year only five or six pleasing mound prospects have come to the majors. In the National League of Cincinnati, Seibold of the Braves and Hattaway of the Cards seem best. Over in the American young Clint Brown of the Indians and Gomez of the Yanks appear to have lasting virtues. But the other youngsters in both leagues thus far have been inward outers.

Four Holdouts

Of all the holdouts, only four remain at this date. Outfielder Edd Roush of the Giants leads the quartet. Pitcher Jimmy Cooney of the Braves is another. Pitcher Pete Fowler of the Cardinals and Chet Nichols of the Phils are the others. So all have been automatic.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

DENNY SHUTE, the Ohio professional who has been writing a series of articles on golf recently, says that his own game has been helped by reading his own advice. "Reading my own lessons has helped my game," says Denny. "You know how it is. . . . You know what to do and what not to do. . . . But you get out there on the course, trying to get distance, and you forget some of the things you know. . . . I was doing just that—slugging at the ball in an effort to get added distance and then wondering why I wasn't keeping my wood shots as straight as usual. . . . I read the article I had written on slugging and I quit struggling. . . . You know I think that is what is the matter with most golfers. . . . they know what to do all right, but they forget. . . . and form a bad habit. . . . which takes some time to correct."

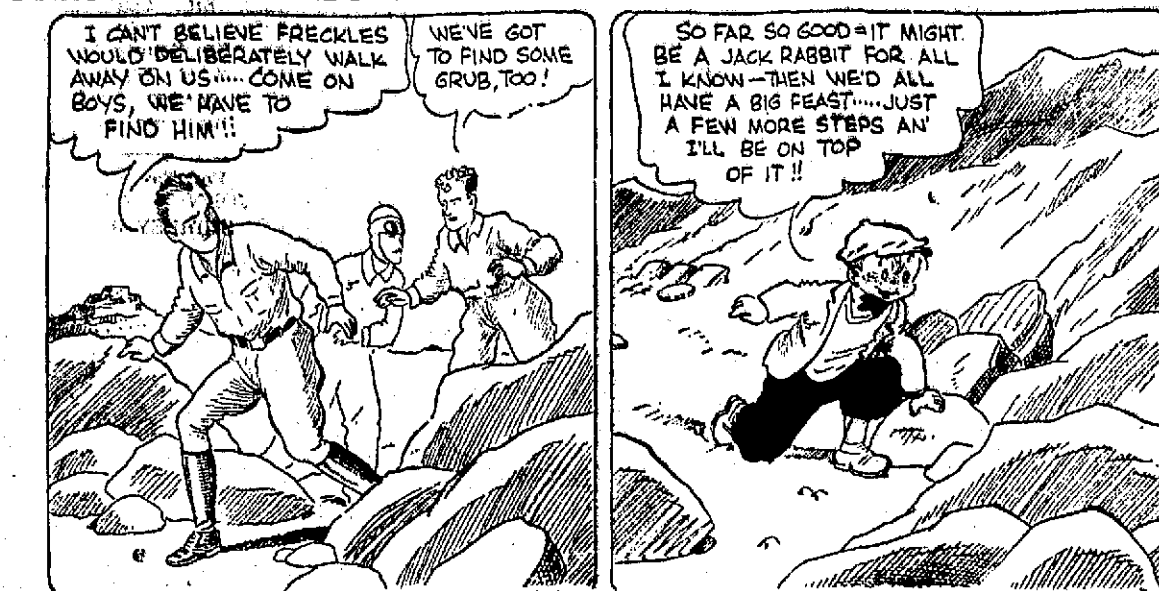

ally suspended, mind you, though it does look as though they have suspended themselves first.

"As Babe goes, so go the Yankees," doesn't seem to be holding water this year. Babe has been going pretty well, thank you, but the Yankees pitchers go for Sweeney, the boss mauler.

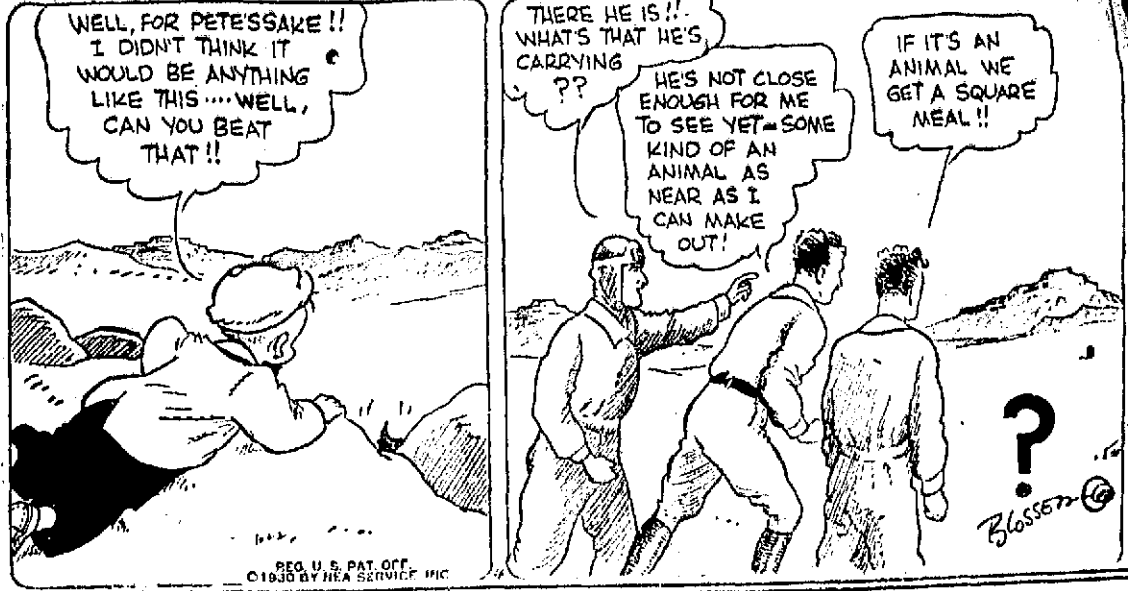

—Hack Wilson, too, has been crowning all and sundry apples thrown his way, but the Cub pitchers also go for Sweeney, the equine chambermaid.

—Baskets don't seem to do a ball team one bit of good. Just as soon as the Pittsburgh fans started throwing parties for the Pirates, the Pirates started slipping down the ladder.

23 victories in a row in 1895. There is nothing in the books about this achievement nor any loose details that this observer can discover about Pitcher Bristow, other than that he was born in Paw Paw, Illinois, and spent his baseball career in minor league company.

Bristow deserves the record, if his supporters are correct, for the best minor league winning streak otherwise was 21 straight, by Baxter Sparks for the Yazoo (Miss.) club of the Delta League in 1904. It's the only mark the "Little Red Book" listed.

Al Spink's book of diamond lore credited Big Jim McCormick with 24 successive pitching victories with Pop Anson's Chicago Nationals of 1886 but a "double check" of this shows Big Jim actually won 16 in a row, fair enough but not a record.

Old Hoss Radbourne, with the Providence Nationals, won 18 in succession in 1884. He won 60 altogether that season and pitched 22 complete games in a row without relief, a world's record that has never been approached.

Speaking of record stunts, "Buster" Chatham, the new third baseman of the Boston Braves, moves into fast company out of a background of excellent performance. Chatham was sold in the middle of last season by the Pueblo (Colorado) club of the Western League to Portland (Ore.) of the Pacific Coast circuit, but before making the switch he equalled Tris Speaker's world record by hitting safely on 11 consecutive times at bat. Chatham hit 368 for Pueblo and finished the coast league season with a mark of .312.

HURT TO STAND, WEAK, NERVOUS

"Cardui Seemed to Build Me Up and I Was Rid of Pain," Says Virginia Lady.

Roanoke, Va.—"Some years ago, I was in a very run-down condition," writes Mrs. T. B. Akers, of 533 Nelson Street, S.E., this city. "I suffered a great deal with pains in my sides and back. Standing on my feet hurt me so much, that I would get very weak and nervous. "I knew that if I didn't get something to help me, I would have to go to bed and stay there, which is hard to do for a woman who has small children. So I kept dragging about, until one day, when feeling unusually bad and discouraged, I happened to pick up a little book with a Cardui advertisement. I decided I would try it. "Cardui seemed to build me up at once, as I was able to do my work with ease, and was rid of the pain by the time I had taken six bottles. "I have taken Cardui since then, whenever I felt that I needed a tonic, and it always helped me. I recommend it to my friends." Get a bottle today.

Roland Farley, third baseman, signed by the St. Louis Cardinals, and Ernest Jenkins, southpaw pitcher awarded a contract by the Philadelphia Athletics, are Duke University products. Al Kimbrell, the Petrel's catcher, was signed by Brooklyn several weeks ago and sent to Johnstown of the New York-Pennsylvania league. Asa Wall, outfielder, goes to the Buffalo Internationals and "Hot" Holcomb, pitcher, to the Boston Braves. Luke Appling, sophomore shortstop, who belted four home-runs in four consecutive times at bat against Mercer university recently, has signed with the Atlanta Crackers.

Florida has to contribute Witt Guise, a lefty, signed by the Yankees; Pitcher Gene Fisher, Brooklyn; and Catcher John Shirley, Brooklyn.

Hugh Starling, Alabama pitcher, has signed with Atlanta of the Southern Association. Atlanta also sought Jim Crawford, star football fullback and cutoffler of the Alabama Poly, but the Auburn flash signed with the Cleveland Indians.

From Furman university at Greenville, S. C., Fred Elrod, pitcher, goes to the Yankees, who probably will place him in the New York-Pennsylvania league. Benny Rothstein, Georgia's first baseman and football fullback, goes to Columbus of the Southeastern league.

Dwight Leveritt, writing in the Galveston (Texas) Tribune, has been digging into old-time baseball history and unearthed a few arguments, one of which involves the longest winning streak any pitcher ever registered.

The major league records are clear enough. Tim Lincecum, right-handed star of the old New York Giants won 19 in a row in 1888. Rube Marquard, left-handed ace of the Giants of 1912, duplicated the feat. In each case, the Chicago Cubs stopped the streak.

When the rest of the baseball territory is taken in, however, it becomes another and complicated story, with record books offering no satisfaction. Bristow, claimed to have reeled off

The Husband Hunter

© 1930 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

REPRINT HERE TODAY

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

NATALIE CONVERS, jealous of her husband's friends, is the heroine of the story. ALAN seeks consolation with her, and she is the one who is the hunter.

Natalie, a young woman, is the heroine of the story. She is a jealous woman, and she is the one who is the hunter. She is the one who is the hunter.

"Or jealous," Alan broke in. "You may as well know it, Bernadine. Her insane jealousy is at the bottom of the whole thing. And I won't tolerate it any longer. There's no use trying to defend her. I came here to tell you I'll make good all that you lost—paper profits included—just as soon as I can raise the cash."

"No, Alan," Bernadine cried emphatically. "I wouldn't let you do that!"

Alan came to a halt before her, he had resumed his striding, and looked down at her thin body and drawn face, ravaged by illness. A great compassion for her welled up in his heart.

"Don't oppose me, Bernadine," he said gently. "Let me be a man in my own way for once. The money is rightfully yours—you need it, I know. The second mortgage on this place—it's been worrying you, hasn't it? And you want to quit the club, don't you? For Bobby's sake."

"It's all right, Alan," she said gently. "I know I have to go—and I'm not sorry. At least, I wouldn't be if it weren't for Bobby, but I'm wondering what will happen to him if you should ever marry again."

"You don't have to worry about that, Bernadine," Alan told her. "I wouldn't marry any woman who didn't love Bobby. And you know Natalie doesn't care for children. I'm glad she'll never have a chance to hurt him," he added fiercely.

Bernadine sighed. "I was afraid it was like that," she said. "Alan, tell me, did Bobby have anything to do with your quarrels with Natalie?"

Alan answered uncomfortably: "She never knew why you sent for me that first night I went to your house."

"Then she was jealous of me?"

"Yes," Alan admitted. "So I thought it best not to tell her about Bobby, unless . . . unless it became unavoidable."

"I'm sorry," Bernadine spoke with deep regret. "I'm afraid I didn't consider your wife that night, Alan; or you, either, perhaps. I was thinking only of Bobby."

"You did me a great honor," Alan quickly assured her. "I'm sorry, too, that Natalie couldn't have shared it with me by being your friend. But that is her fault, not ours, Bernadine."

Alan got up and paced the length of Bernadine's somewhat exotic living room, kicking aside a big fat floor cushion that got in his way and then instantly apologizing with a brief: "Sorry."

Bernadine, relaxed. "I was afraid," she said, "that you were going to Natalie, and you shouldn't do that until you're calmer."

"I've already seen her," Alan replied, his face darkening and his lips growing even harder than they had been before. Then he wheeled sharply, and faced Bernadine. "This is the end for me and Natalie," he declared, with unmistakable finality in his suddenly lowered voice.

Bernadine realized his conviction of Natalie's guilt permitted no argument, but she did think that he might be less bitter, less hurt, if he talked about it with someone.

"Well," she began, speaking unemotionally, "let us assume that Natalie did it; don't you think we ought to try to find out if there was any excuse for it?"

"Excuse?" Alan shouted. "What excuse could there be for a thing like that?" He glared at Bernadine as though he defied her to answer him, for he was past even wanting to believe in Natalie's honesty.

"Perhaps she didn't realize how serious it was," Bernadine suggested. "She may have thought she was just causing you some slight trouble because she was piqued or . . ."

"But I was desperate about the money," she went on. "You see, I . . . I didn't know about you and Natalie . . . when she went home. I thought you might have parted. You know you were very strange and unhappy those days, Alan, and she was gone so long . . ."

Her voice dropped, drifted away as though it were lost in a fog. Alan spoke up sharply.

"You were right," he said. "We had parted, but Natalie came back and we made it up—in a way. But that's getting off the subject. I want you to agree to do as I say about your financial affairs in the future."

Bernadine did not answer at once. Alan waited. Then she said, musingly: "I wonder."

"You mean . . . you're doubtful about trusting me?" Alan asked.

"No, Alan, not about trusting you. But there are so many things that can happen, especially if you and Natalie really are at the parting of the ways."

"Well, we are," Alan replied, earnestly. "But that makes no difference to you, Bernadine. I love Bobby. I believe I've grown more or less to think of him as my own son. Why, I'd be crazy about having him in my home . . ."

He broke off abruptly, aware too late of the significance of his words. Bobby in his home meant Bernadine—dead. Silently he cursed himself for a blundering fool. But she guessed the cause of his sudden perturbation, and smiled understandingly at him.

"It's all right, Alan," she said gently. "I know I have to go—and I'm not sorry. At least, I wouldn't be if it weren't for Bobby, but I'm wondering what will happen to him if you should ever marry again."

"You don't have to worry about that, Bernadine," Alan told her. "I wouldn't marry any woman who didn't love Bobby. And you know Natalie doesn't care for children. I'm glad she'll never have a chance to hurt him," he added fiercely.

Bernadine sighed. "I was afraid it was like that," she said. "Alan, tell me, did Bobby have anything to do with your quarrels with Natalie?"

Norma Shearer Stars In "Divorce" Talkie

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer did well by Norma Shearer in giving her "The Divorcee" as her newest talking vehicle, for the Ursula Parrott story of a woman who attempts to show her husband that there is a double standard for women as well as for men, contains far more meat than does the average film plot.

The general atmosphere of "The Divorcee" is in the vein of Miss Shearer's past success, "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," with this difference, that the latter vehicle was done in the manner of a farce, while the new film is powerful in its emotional significance.

Sophisticated Plot

The story concerns the hectic career of Jerry Bernard, a young society woman whose husband has deserted her when he discovered that she has had an affair with his best friend. Although he himself has been unfaithful to his wife, he refuses to admit that women may apply the double standard equally as well as men.

Jerry takes love where she finds it and is on the verge of eloping with a man whose wife has lost her beauty as a result of an automobile accident, when an event occurs which changes the course of her life. There is no need to take the "kick" out of this climax in telling anything about it beforehand other than to note that i brings the picture to an entirely logical and fitting close.

Lavish Production

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer apparently left no stone unturned in an effort to give the production an adequate background, the environment of New York's millionaire society being brilliantly achieved in both costuming and scenic effects. Scenes of special merit include a beautiful yachting sequence and modernistic interiors in a Parisian cafe.

"The Divorcee," opens a three day run at the Saenger starting today. Miss Shearer has made no mistake in going back to her sophisticated characterizations for which her calm assurance, immaculate beauty and mature acting have previously fitted her.

Nelson Rockefeller's Bride-To-Be
His Sweetheart Of Maine Beaches

Mary Todhunter Clark, of Philadelphia, and Nelson A. Rockefeller, second son of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who will be married June 23.

Philadelphia, June 4.—(AP)—The wedding here on June 23 of Miss Mary Todhunter Clark and Nelson A. Rockefeller, Jr., will mark a new chapter in a tale of romance which had its beginning on the beaches of Maine.

It was not far from there that the young scion of the house of Rockefeller was born.

It was near Northeast Harbor, Me., that these two minds found a mutual interest in the great outdoors.

Both are fond of horseback riding, tennis, photography, swimming and hikes through the hills.

Both families spent the summers there several years ago. Miss Clark and Nelson were very young then—he is only 21 now and she is 22.

But each summer they met again and the romance blossomed.

Made Debut In 1926
Miss Clark made her debut at a tea here in October, 1926. She is identified with the activities of the younger social set in this city and New York.

During the last two years she has been responsible for much of the social service work sponsored by the Junior League.

In dramatic productions presented by the league she has taken difficult parts and has appeared in specialty dances at the Junior League Cabaret.

Black Rot Present
In Grape Suckers

The presence of large numbers of suckers in grape vineyards, due apparently to winter injury to the vines, has resulted in an unusual type of black rot infection on the suckers, which if neglected will undoubtedly make control of the fruit rot very difficult this year if precautions to prevent it are not taken very shortly, states Dr. V. H. Young, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

In a recent tour of grape vineyards of Washington county it was found that even in well sprayed vineyards large numbers of black-rot infections occur near the base of the suckers and wherever they are in contact with the soil. Such infections undoubtedly occurred rather early in the season from spores liberated from old decayed fruit on the ground and probably could not have been controlled by spraying. This early infection on young sprouts appears as elongated, dark, sunken spots on the canes, and as brownish spots on the early leaves. Microscopic examinations show that mature spores of the black rot fungus are already present on these diseased suckers and that only a good rain is necessary to spread the disease rapidly. Since it is considered good practice from other points of view to remove suckers from the vines, it is advisable that they be pulled and hauled out of the vineyard as soon as possible. Except where black rot is already in the bunches this practice combined with thorough spraying should give excellent black rot control this year.

Picturesque Hotels Await Hoover

WASHINGTON, June 4.—(AP)—Comfort and luxury coupled with rugged scenic grandeur will be President Hoover's portion when he makes his trip through the national parks in August.

The parks he will visit are all equipped with hotels as fine in point of service as any in the country. While most of them are rustic style architecture, they have luxurious suites of rooms and excellent cuisine.

A nightfall, after motoring through miles of beautiful scenery the President probably will seek rest in such places as the Ahwahnee, near million dollar hotel in the Yosemite, and the famous old Faithful Inn in Yellowstone park.

Ahwahnee, which is the old Indian name for Yosemite, means deep, grassy valley. The builders of the hotel planned it as a distinctive expression of the Yosemite.

A fountain of jasper rock from the Merced river canyon is a feature of the spacious lounge.

In Glacier National Park in Montana the Many Glacier hotel contrasts the coolness of the atmosphere with steam heat, fire places and all modern comforts.

A $300,000 addition was made recently to the famous Old Faithful Inn in the Yellowstone. Old Faithful geyser can be seen from many of the hotel rooms.
